What I discovered have been the standard disclaimers put out by websites of this sort, the kind that say earnings aren't guaranteed, and that these big payouts aren't typical. As I seemed around the Chaturbate website I discovered lots of similarities with different sex cam outfits, and lots of the differences were merely how issues have been worded. On the user side viewers can search by things like breast measurement and sexual specialties, and I view that as a web positive as well. From what I can see Chaturbate is pretty first rate at categorization, however I did find that some users complained of inconsistent and inaccurate tagging. Since I am wanting at the site with the eyes of a model and performer, I can see how this is in a position to be a problem.
